DEDICATION

Twenty-five years ago the class of 1923 put forth the first yearbook of New Brighton High School after much concerted effort. We would not recognize this small, paper-bound book as an antecedent of our present Alaurum. Most of us would, we're certain, be amused by the "artistic" sketches, and would laugh at the senior pictures of a quaint, bespectacled maiden captioned, "She Taught Clara Bow How." We certainly wouldn't recognize the bobby-soxer of that day, charmingly attired in black cotton stockings, high heels, and an umbrella-shaped bonnet. And who would know the dashing young "Van Johnson" who sported a slouch hat? The sportswoman wore a middy blouse and bloomers, and the hero of the grid-iron arrayed himself in football pants which reached to his armpits. The '23 Alaurum devoted ten pages to jokes, a section which no longer appears in our issues. But despite these peculiarities, this was our first yearbook, and we are very proud of it.

Through the years our Alaurum has grown and changed. New clubs appeared, and others dropped out. The paper bindings were exchanged for ones of sturdy leather, and somewhere along the line the members of the classes grew in numbers. The Alaurum progressed with our school and is an accurate record of New Brighton High's growth and development.

We might also think of the Alaurum as reflecting some of our town and national history. During the war years the books were dedicated to our soldiers and were filled with pictures of our faculty members who were in the armed services. With the introduction of plans for a municipal playground in New Brighton came a section in the Alaurum of that year, 1945, devoted to this idea. So we can prove we were not self-centered in our thinking and planning for the yearbooks.

But there is more cause for publishing a yearbook than just as a record of progress. School spirit, pride, whatever you may call it, is alone fair reason. The first Alaurum staff was proud of its class, its activities and accomplishments, its school, and it wanted all New Brighton to know it. It wanted to establish an enduring memorial, one which might last as long as the school stood. We know that their aim has been accomplished, for the Alaurum has been in existence for twenty-five years, and we are certain that it will exist for a hundred more.

Therefore, we, the staff of the 1948 Alaurum, are proud to dedicate this issue to the twenty-five years of Alaurum publishing which have preceded us. Through the years the various staffs labored to set standards which would endure beyond their time, and we are confident that they have succeeded at their task. The Alaurum has become a lasting tradition of New Brighton High School.

School Board

Decisions of vital importance to the New Brighton school system are debated and discussed monthly by the school board composed of men who are well aware of their responsibilities. Their efforts are repaid only by the evidence of progress in our schools and by the smooth operation of the complicated mechanism composing the school system.

To the Class of 1948

After twelve long hard years of schooling, you have achieved the goal of commencement toward which you have been working. This achievement should make you both proud and happy. Many times discouragement has beset your efforts, but you have persevered through this struggle and won the battle. Now you are on the threshold of another field of endeavor and must look toward a higher goal. As you receive your diploma, strive to accept life's challenge and apply the lessons learned in New Brighton High School to your everyday living. That each day present you with enough problems to solve that you may increase in wisdom, knowledge, and understanding is my sincere wish for you.

Faculty Introduction

Hereby we present a group of untiring individuals who managed to take time out from exams, late papers, makeup tests, detention hall, and a million and one other "trifles" to have their pictures taken for our Alaurum. Limitless credit must be extended to our faculty who are noted for their great endurance and patient good humor in the face of situations which would cause anyone lacking in stamina to hand in his resignation and leave for South Africa.

Student Introduction

Those countless characters known by other, more uncomplimentary, names to the faculty make up our student body. They may be viewed rallying to the team's support at football and basketball games, enjoying free lunches at club meetings, participating in school dances, and occasionally coming to school. Twice a year they settle down and attempt to cram a sufficient amount of knowledge into overloaded brains in preparation for those unnecessary trials and tribulations known as examinations. Finally they emerge into the outside world unburdened by any information they might have contacted during four years of what is termed "a grind."

The World's Challenge

*You have given us the challenge,
The challenge to keep peace,
That we unify the nations
To cause all strife to cease.*

*Although today we are your youth,
Tomorrow's leaders we;
We have learned the bitter lesson,
War must not, cannot be.*

*How can we meet this challenge?
The goal which through the years,
The other generations lost,
And wasted blood and tears?*

*Men's wars are cruel and needless,
Gain too little, lose too much;
Our children must be saved from this,
From desolation's clutch.*

*Peace does not ask that lives be lost,
The road of war be trod,
But asks the most important thing,
The blessed help of God.*

*So we must not fail this purpose,
The purpose to keep peace;
When you, the world, sees God is love,
Then needless wars will cease.*

"Goal to Go"

As we, the class of '48, began our journey through our four years of high school, we were quite confused. To such frantic freshman questions as "Where are the portables?" we received the usual fantastic answers from upper classmen. Several of the freshman rooms sponsored dances which aided in stocking our class treasury. Our class officers for this year were: President—Willard Snowberger, Vice-President—Dick Saltzer, Secretary—Goldie Zimmerman, Treasurer—Ralph Lovette. Although we depended on the help of our teachers when things were tough, we thought nothing could be more confusing as we struggled through that first long year in N. B. H. S.

Then we began our second year as sophomores; and, of course, we were proud to sit on the first floor with the upper classmen during assembly periods. Officers of the class for this year were: President—Clarence Watts, Vice-President—Eleanor Grisnik, Secretary—Betty Novosel, Treasurer—Bill Shields. We had become more accustomed now to all the secrets of N. B. H. S. which the upper classmen had refused to reveal to us, and although we stumbled along the way, we were always willing to get up and try again. This year we had three one act plays which enabled many students to take part. We had set a goal of high achievement for ourselves and were determined to reach it.

When we were well on our way along our third year as juniors, we paused to drink again from the fountain of entertainment. From this fountain came our Junior Class Play, Ever Since Eve, in which several of the members of our class proved themselves to be very promising young actors and actresses. We also had four successful class literaries. Serving as our class officers this year were: President—Clarence Watts, Vice-President—Willard Snowberger, Secretary—Marilyn Jackson, Treasurer—Jim Kornman. The highly successful Junior-Senior Prom brought to a close our junior year.

As we reached our fourth and last year, we began to realize how much we had achieved in the three preceding years, and just up ahead we could see our desired end. We produced two successful class plays and several literaries. This year serving as our class officers were: President—Ralph Lovette, Vice-President—Ralph Dyson, Secretary—William Kester, Treasurer—Clarence Watts. Fifteen senior boys from our class were lost from the football team by graduation. The Alaurum Staff worked very hard, as it always does, and produced one of the finest year books ever put out by a graduating class of N. B. H. S. We are proud to have come so far during our four years in high school. There were times when we became disheartened, but we never quite gave up until we finally reached our graduation goal.

SENIOR LITERARY

With a program in October observing Pennsylvania Week, we began our last year of high school literaries. As seniors, we were determined to have the best literary programs we had ever presented, and with this as a goal, a good beginning was made. Increased formality in both the subjects themselves and the manner in which they were presented was noticeable. Speeches dealing with our State Constitution, the founding of our state, and less familiar subjects concerning Pennsylvania were given along with various musical selections. In December we joined with the juniors in a Christmas Literary to which we invited the entire school. Music by the chorus and band, the traditional Christmas reading, and a play were features of this program which included something new and different. This "something" was Santa Claus who distributed gifts to a few students and faculty members. The officers who presided over literary this year were:

President -----	EARL PRESTON
Vice President -----	JOHN TOMSIC
Secretary -----	WILLIAM CARDOSI
Marshal -----	JAMES MACDONALD

We wish to thank those faculty members who have made our literaries successful in the years we have been in high school. Without the help of these it would have been impossible to have such excellent, if any, literaries.

SENIOR CLASS PLAY

On the evening of November 21, 1947 the class of 1948 presented the first Senior Class Play, a comedy entitled "The Bachelor's Wife." This production was under the direction of Miss Ethel Lytle.

Harold Claypoole, the bachelor, tried to make a living by writing. He told his father, "M. A.," he had a wife and child and believing this, "M. A." would send Harold money when he needed it.

Harold thought his life was ruined when "M. A." decided to visit him but things came to a happy, hilarious end when Harold received a large check for one of his novels.

The play cast included:

Harold Claypoole -----	EDWIN GAULT
M. A. Claypoole -----	JACK McNITT
Stewart Kirby -----	PAUL BLACKBURN
Lillian Kirby -----	JACKIE WILLIAMS
Pearl Kirby -----	NORA LEE BLACKBURN
Mrs. Oberhoffer -----	ELEANOR GRISNIK
Gertrude -----	ANNA MARY DOUGLASS
Mrs. Edgewater -----	DOROTHY BOWSER
Dinky -----	RAYMOND McBRIDE

Ann Rosenberg was the Student Director and many other seniors helped to make the play a success.

CODICIL TO THE WILL

We, the class of 1948 of New Brighton High School, bequeath to Jean and Joan Milne gold-plated name plates in order that we can tell which one of them is greeting us in their usual indistinguishable, but pleasant manner.

—JIM KORNMAN

Prophecy of the Class of 1948

As we sit in our classrooms these balmy May days, we suddenly realize with a sharp pain in our hearts that in a few short days we shall no longer be members of New Brighton High School, but instead we will be just a group of young men and women about to face the world. It hurts when we realize that many of our closest friends will now become casual acquaintances whom we shall see only from time to time. Even some we shall probably never see again. As we sit bolt upright in our seats, stunned by this thought, we cannot help but wonder what will become of the classmates sitting around us. It does not take much imagination to picture them in their respective positions in the passing parade of life.

As we relax and listen, we become aware of the drowsy hum of life outside. An airplane drones overhead, and we can see in our imagination Paul Balik and Bob Frantz in the pilot's cockpit. Airplanes remind us of the need not only for pilots but also for stewardesses, navigators, radio men, scientists, engineers, and mechanics. Someday in the near future, boys from our class will be holding these positions. Mike Geronimo could well be a radio operator, and Jack Kelvington a navigator on that same plane we just heard. Such mechanical geniuses as Paul Spiker and Bill Hodgkinson may be helping to keep that plane in A-1 condition. It could be also that Dick Zinser and Fred Curcio had supervised its design and construction. The interior of the plane might be under the excellent care of Stewardess Marilyn Wolf, Judy McDanel, Betty Henry, or Delores Clapie. On the high seas we might find two very able ship captains from New Brighton, namely Charles Shimer and Charles Majors. Back on land we would have Don Jerome and Bill McGraw as cross-country truck drivers. Trucks like theirs will need expert mechanics, and we think Bill Smith, Merle Spickerman, and Paul Blackburn should prove particularly adept at this work. Trains should still be a major method of travel, and in the crystal ball of our imagination we see David Hays at the throttle of a crack Deisel streamliner racing across the continent. This same engine might have been designed by Bob Berchtold and built under the capable engineering of Jim Kornman.

Going on to the automobile industry, we may find Tom Hurley and Phil Dalbey as executives in a large assembly plant. Wayne Cable could very well be a bookkeeper in a concern like that, and Patricia Doyle, an accountant. Any factory with large orders coming in every day needs efficient secretaries, and we are sure Toni Chufe and Martha Gaudio would make good ones. Dave Jenkins could very ably handle the duties as head foreman on an assembly line. Automobiles will always need gasoline—at least until scientists Bill Kester and Eugene Ortelt harness atomic power. In the meantime, men will be needed to sell it, and Jack Roles and Ken Locke are past masters at this work. Without a doubt they will own a chain of incorporated service stations across the country.

In the field of engineering our school will be well represented by Jack Dewhirst and Jack Manypenny. Electronics hold high interest for several of our classmates also. Howard Miller, Ray McBride, Harvey Greathouse, and Ray Straile have already made known to us their interest in this field. With a sharp word, our teacher snaps us out of our day dreaming, and we hastily return to our books.

Books bring to mind that Anne Spearman may someday be the author of a popular best-seller. On the stage, we might find Jerry Hartman and Nora Lee Blackburn playing in one of Jean Brandenberger's original Broadway hits. On the other side of our nation, we would not be a bit surprised to find Hollywood wrapped around Donna Carson's little finger. We wouldn't be surprised, either, to find Harold Wilson as a leading producer. We can see Ann Rosenberg seated behind the editor's desk of a large newspaper. She may have Sally Paff and Dick Saltzer as her star journalists. Bettie Mason and Elsie Merriman would make able stenographers for a paper with such outstanding personnel. Handling the scoops would be ace reporter Jim MacDonald. When some of these federal headline cases require expert detective services, the Nicholson brothers, John and Bill, two of America's best F. B. I. agents, could very well take charge.

Musically, New Brighton has always had talent. We expect Alice Riddel, Charlotte Van Kirk, Melvin Allison, and Moses Barrett to carry the Crimson and Gold reputation into the operatic field. As instrumental artists we look for Margaret Sheffield on the harp, and Geraldine McDanel and Janet Healy on the organ to become well-known in music circles. Among the younger set we may hear excited gasps and sighs when the dance bands of Bill Howe, Ralph Brewer, and Ronnie Powell, are announced over the radio. These boys have shown great promise while in high school.

New Brighton has always produced outstanding athletes, and this class is no exception. We can see Jack Ramsey playing professional football. Joe Kross and Bill Cardosi might be coaching football at some large high school. Sam Ursida, coaching a professional team, would be our lone representative in basketball. We may find Ralph Lovette and John Pfeifer playing with a big league baseball club, managed by Chuck Paton. Announcing some of these big-league games would be Steve Mulik, our second Bill Stern. On the radio, too, would be Steve's old side-kick Jim Stock, as a famous and hilariously funny comedian. Both Bill Sylvester and Byron Molter could be sports writers for a leading sports magazine.

Several of those seated around us are going to get "down to earth" and become farmers. George Yeager, Don Measel, and Helen Huffman will no doubt become "tillers of the soil." Don Charles will become a scientific farmer, experimenting with cross-breeds and hybrids. If one of his experiments should go drastically wrong and someone should lose a tooth on it, he may rest assured that either Joanne Martin or Ivan Braund will give him the best of care, for they should surely make good dentists. We can imagine Ducky Tomsic as a fancy baker, making towering wedding cakes for prominent socialites. Keith Seiple and Bob Murphy we see in the wholesale food business; Keith handling groceries, and Bob selling meat. We picture Genevieve Wahl as the owner and operator of a large, attractive, exclusive restaurant. Either Ann Phillis or Faye Miller might work for her as head dietitian. Shirley McBrien, Martha Osborne, and Betty Hupp will probably become most competent secretaries.

As the teacher tells us to stop our daydreaming, we think of those in our group who might enter the teaching profession. Frances Scott, we think, will teach elementary school music. Anna Mary Douglas and Rose Goehring are pictured in a far-off country as missionaries. June Dambach and Marilyn Jackson may be teaching sports to girls as physical education instructors. Frances Bonzo and Nancy Field would have a fine time as kindergarten teachers. Another of the belles of our class, Ginnie Reehl, we see as a math teacher in a secondary school. Edwin Gault and Clarence Watts should make good C. P. A.'s.

Into every life some rain must fall, and usually that takes the form of sickness. When we are sick, we need patient, kind, and sympathetic nurses. Such girls as Mary Howard, Jeanne Weber, Alice Gold, and Helenanne Budiscak should make good ones. Eleanor Grisnick and Dorothy Powers will probably take care of our more complicated ailments as women doctors.

Milady of the future will be especially well-groomed under the expert care of beauticians Rita Dunn, Joan Regney, Dorothy Bowser, and Betty Connolly. She may be wearing a dress designed by Wanda Mittner or Jo Anne Matheny, and made under the watchful eye of the leading seamstress, Mildred Rhodes. Without a doubt, in some future newspaper we shall read of the television and radar work of the brilliant scientist Payson Clyde, and of the revolutionary materials developed by metallurgist Nick Shutey. In the same paper we may see glamorous pictures of such well-known models as Rose Krkuc, Jackie Williams, and Betty Novosel taken by the professional photographer Mary Watson.

In the business world, several young men will have made names for themselves. Foremost among these will probably be Willard Snowberger and Andy Miladin. They no doubt will be assisted by private secretaries Rita Falkinson and Barbara Grecich. On their staff of buyers and salesmen they will have Delores Beegle, Gail Gordon, and Earl Emler.

Among those girls who sweetly coo, "Number, please," will be some "48'ers." Rosemarie Fash, Rose Klemens, and Margaret Tracy will carry New Brighton's reputation to the switchboard. Patty Pariso and Delores Langnecker will be doing switchboard work in private industry. A few of our girls will hold down the hardest job in the world—feeding a hungry husband. These undaunted lassies will be Beverly Brewer, Esther Welsh, Agnes Terek, Goldie Zimmerman, Kathryn Shotsinger, and Peggy Nippert. The Milne twins, Jean and Joan, will have a children's store, specializing in clothing for twins, triplets, quadruplets, and quintuplets.

We must lend some of our talent to the Armed Forces. Robert Leppla will be in the Air Force and Bill Frkuska will be New Brighton's pride of the Marines. We can picture a Public Secretaries Corporation headed by Rita Ubelacker and Ina Epstein and employing Catherine Brinker, Eleanor Myers, Mary Tribone, Phyllis Scheffler, and Norma Wurzel. Joan Enke will be doing superb work as a social service worker in some slum district. Joe VanLear and Bob Wurzel might be located in a factory specializing in fine craftsmanship where Wilfred Plassmeyer might be a foreman. Loretta Moore and Eugene Smith can readily be pictured as successful artists living in typical Greenwich Village style as a result of their costly paintings.

George Bosworth and Frank Curcio are the only outdoor men of the class. Frank will have the enviable job of operating a fleet of deep-sea fishing boats catering to millionaires, and George will be a forest ranger in one of our national parks. Earl Preston will be head of a construction company. Walter Tomsic, as a jeweler, will be one of the most popular men around N. B. H. S., since he will see that the clocks keep correct time, and that the class rings are delivered promptly and in good condition. Bill Taylor will carry his oratorical abilities into the courtroom, where he will be an outstanding criminal lawyer.

Last but not least, we come to the end of the last row where Jim Beck and Ralph Dyson are sitting. They will preside at the end of many of us as they dig their way through life as morticians.

Glancing around us once more, we grow sad at the thought of leaving these comrades, but we are satisfied, knowing that each one will be a success in life. Still, our satisfaction is not quite complete; we cannot help but feel someone has been missed. Oooh! Who is that sitting away over in the corner? Who can it be that is never allowed to sit with the rest of the class? Who is this person, hiding behind a book because a paper wad from his sling-shot went astray in class? Ah, it's Bill Shields, who is really going to settle down in life and become a great architect.

It's been fun, making these prophecies for our classmates of 1948, but it will be even more fun, several years from now, to see how they will have been fulfilled.

—JACK McNITT

PROPHECY OF THE PROPHET

I saw by the morning paper, "The Pittsburgh Post Gazette," May 21, 1960, that Dr. John M. McNitt, a prominent young surgeon of Pittsburgh had secured world-wide acclaim for his diagnosis and surgical treatment of a rare brain disease. The paper stated that he had been graduated from New Brighton High School and the University of Pennsylvania. The name Dr. McNitt sounded familiar to me; and upon taking up the "Alaurum" of 1948, I found him to be Jack McNitt, a fellow graduate. His professional success was credited to his strong character and energetic nature.

JUNIOR CLASS HISTORY

The class of '49 has successfully completed the third step in high school education. Inspired by the success of our first two years, we pushed on to great heights under the direction of Ed Ayers as President and Bob Mujwit as his assistant. We elected Thelma Hamilton to keep the records and Dick Swaney to have charge of the finances. We owe much to our faculty advisor, Mr. Miller.

The most outstanding event of the year was the presentation of our class play, IS ZAT SO, on February 27, under the capable direction of Miss Virginia Couch. The auditorium was crowded and the play, acclaimed by all, a huge success. The Junior-Senior Prom was another outstanding accomplishment of the Junior Class.

In our final year, we hope to rise to still greater heights so that we may uphold the honor of our class and of New Brighton High School.

JUNIOR LITERARY

The literary programs presented by the Junior Class during the past year have proved even more interesting and novel than those in our previous years. The first meeting, held on October 31, 1947, was based on the topic of Hallowe'en. Composing this program were several musical selections, Hallowe'en poems, a reading concerning the origin of Hallowe'en, and a mysterious play under the direction of Miss Shelar. The junior and senior classes presented the Christmas program before the entire school on December 23, 1947. A chorus of girls sang Christmas carols, and the dance band played several numbers. A reading and a play completed this literary. The following meetings proved to be as successful as these, with the co-operation of the faculty and the class, under the leadership of our sponsor, Mr. Miller. The officers of the year were:

President	BEN FOX
Vice President	DENNIS ZETTLE
Secretary	WILMA KOHNE
Marshal	BOB POWERS

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

We, the class of 1950, returned to the stately halls and classrooms of New Brighton High in September, 1947, to find ourselves worthy members of the upper classes. What a contrast to our former lowly position as Freshies! Now we were privileged to sit in the auditorium as our vacated places in the balcony became the camping ground of a less fortunate group who appeared to be Indians, judging from their "war paint" (lipstick).

Early in October at a class meeting held for the purpose of class organization, we selected as our officers, President, Jim Circle; Vice-President, Russell Couch; Secretary, Phillis Coxson; and Treasurer, Jim Boswell. Under the leadership of these officers and with the help of our advisor, Mr. McQueen, a most successful year was achieved.

Our class successfully sponsored its share of the weekly school dances during the calendar year. The greatest achievement of the year came with the presentation of an "Evening of Plays." Here, through the medium of three one-act plays we gave ample demonstration of our dramatic ability. We have likewise made valuable contributions to the athletic teams and musical organizations, especially the band. Consequently, we look forward to the Junior year with great anticipation of successful accomplishments.

SOPHOMORE LITERARY

The class of "1950" has presented three excellent literaries during 1947-48. Our programs have always been varied and entertaining. Program features during the year included one-act plays, floor talks, pantomines, a quiz contest, readings, group singing, and various instrumental numbers. The Sophomore band which so ably performed in our last literary gave ample proof of the class's musical talent.

We are most grateful to all the Sophomore teachers who have worked so patiently in preparing our programs. It was this successful co-operation between faculty advisors and participating students which made our meetings of such a high order.

The literary officers who have so capably served the Sophomore Class for the year 1947-48 are as follows:

President	JOYCE CHANDLER
Vice President	DELORES VANDERSLICE
Secretary	LINDA BAUM
Marshal	JACK SNOWDEN
